WOMAN'S CLUB MEET.

decided upon but the committee will report at the November meeting. The music committee reported that a club chorus will be formed and the board voted to buy the music for them. The management of the Athenaeum has consented to sell guest tickets for the club and hereafter they may be procured there.

Home Gardening Work.

Mrs. Rebecca Fairbanks reported for the home gardening committee that the expense had been much less than anticipated. The work was in charge of Miss Howe at the Museum. A large percentage of the children ordered seeds through the Museum and started small gardens at their homes. Plots were provided at the Museum and the Portland street and Arlington schools. There were 17 gardens at the Museum, 10 at Arlington and 8 at Portland St. A class of 30 joined the State Boys' and Girls' club. The gardens are now being cleared and financial reports sent to the state committee. Mr. E. L. Ingalls, at Burlington. The largest gain reported was that of a third grade girl, Ruth Moffet, of Summerville who cleared $7 from the sale of flowers and still has her vegetables to sell. Mrs. Fairbanks also reported that the school lunches were such a success last year, as carried on by the club, that the school board has arranged to have them continued this year under the direction of the home economics department.

Teaching Children Music.

Mrs. Hovey spoke of the work which had been done during the summer at the clubhouse under the direction of Miss Gratia D. Balch. Many of the club knew little of this work which was done through the club house, association and all were deeply interested in Miss Balch's report which follows:

"As I have watched for several years the hundreds of children who have applied for admission to the music school settlement, only to be put on the waiting list and the 900 happy ones who come every week to the school for their lessons, two things have made a deep impression on me—one that an inconceivably large number of people are music hungry and the other that music teaches most exquisitely the art of development. These things are true of city children, why not of country children? And the work at the clubhouse this summer proved my point. The Club House association very kindly gave the use of the club rooms two mornings a week for my experiment, and through the members of the board and the public school teachers I secured the children—the only condition was that the children should love music—and five cents a week was charged to cover the small expense involved. The first call brought 15, practically all from one neighborhood and as I was the only teacher and was theoretically having a vacation I did not extend the invitation. The work was done in classes, eight beginners about six years old, five a size larger and two older ones who had private lessons and helped with the little ones. We met two mornings a week for two months. When we started some of us couldn't sing a note but by the end of the time we were all singing folk songs together, playing little pieces on the piano and making up our own little songs, both words and music.

No difficulty seemed unsurmountable—where there was no piano at a child's house, usually there was one at an aunt's or grand mother's. One little girl sold flowers to pay for her lessons but the biggest of all was on circus day when one small girl gave up the parade rather than miss her music lesson. At the close of the lessons the children had a party for their mothers and friends and showed them what we had been doing through the summer and also talked over plans for continuing their music lessons. A few could afford to pay the regular fee of a good teacher and still more will continue with one of the younger teachers."

After the reading of Miss Balch's report by the secretary the club, upon the motion of Mrs. Hazen, unanimously voted to give her a vote of thanks.

District Nurse Secured.

The board reported that a district nurse has been secured who she is not quite ready to begin work. The music of the afternoon consisted of two beautifully rendered solos by Mrs. Ida P. Brooks, who sang by special request. A feature of the meeting which helped make it enjoyable was the removal of all hats at the request of the speaker, Miss Arnold. This is the regular thing in most clubs and makes listening much easier.

COLLEGE CLUB MEETING.

Dr. Alice E. Wakefield Gave Able Address on "Child Welfare."

At an open meeting of the College club last Friday afternoon the members and friends of the club met at the Fairbanks Museum to listen to Dr. Alice E. Wakefield speak on "Child Welfare." After an appropriate introduction by the president, Miss Alice W. Wilcox, Dr. Wakefield presented a most appealing and impressive paper on the facts we must all face in the matter of the physical welfare of children.

The wealth of any nation has been rightly said to be its children, yet the United States, which today is counted the wealthiest in material things of the 31 countries of the world comes 20th in the per cent. of infant mortality. We have slowly discovered ourselves to be a wasteful nation as well as a wealthy one, and lately conservation of our resources has come to be the watchword of the hour. Especially has the need of conservation of our vital energy become apparent until various ways of meeting the need have been utilized and the government itself has taken a hand and organized a Bureau of Physical Welfare. Yet at the present rate it will not be possible to construct measures fast enough to insure sound mental and physical men and women until everybody realizes his moral responsibility in forcing more preventive measures to protect children while they are growing to maturity.

Evening Extension Classes.

The public schools will continue in manual training and mechanical drawing, and in cookery. The registration for these courses can be made Monday evening, October 25 at the Summer Street building, and also at the superintendent's office during school hours. The cost of tuition will be $2 for 20 lessons in manual training and mechanical drawing and $1 plus cost of materials used in each of the following courses in cookery:

1. Plain Cookery: Cooking, serving, dietary value and cost of the common food materials will be considered. Twelve lessons.

2. Fancy Cookery: More elaborate preparation of food—requires a knowledge of the simpler cooking processes. Ten lessons.

3. Special Course: Offered to girls of academy age or older who wish to take a brief course in domestic science. Twenty lessons.

Judge Tyler on Local Option

In accepting the presidency of the Local Option League of Vermont, Hon. James M. Tyler, former Justice of the Supreme Court, put the issue of Local Option vs. Prohibition squarely before the voters. He said in part:

"A grave question is before the voters of the State—whether they will continue local option, which has proved a success in preventing the sale of intoxicating liquors, or turn it down and return to the prohibitory law, which was less effective than local option."

Judge Tyler is an unswerving advocate of temperance, and invariably votes "No" when the question is before him of license or no-license in his home town, but he believes in the effectiveness of the present law. He does not approve the Perry prohibitory law. His example might well be followed by those who believe in
